NextLevel101.com is a new tool developed for boys & girls high school basketball players to be seen by Division I, II, III, NAIA and JUCO coach's by using video sharing technology on world wide web. Specifically this site is geared towards role players and good players (diamonds in the ruff)...not necessarily the superstar.

At our site, you can keep up-to-date game statistics, upload video footage and maintain important information to be viewed by college coach's and staff. No staged workouts or highlight video footage.

College Coach's, you get to watch some really good players perform! You can create a Watch List to keep track of certain players. Meaning, when a player adds or updates video footage and/or stats, they'll know. Other important information like GPA, ACT scores and game schedules are also available.

So why use this tool?

Every coach can't go to every game. So, we are taking the game along with important statistical information to them!

We at NextLevel101.com believe that it is not up to the players high school coach to get a player from high school into a college, university or whatever the next level may be. Even though many high school coaches do assist players as much as possible in making calls and sending out media.

This tool is design to cut down on the time and effort of completing these task!

Furthermore, it can be done by anyone interested in helping a player get to the Next Level...including the player, parents, even the high school audio/video department.

All it takes is 3 easy steps!

1. Create the video footage.
2. Upload and display the players video, stats, etc. at NextLevel101.com
3. Send out player information to college coaches, recruiters, scouts, etc.

Create the video footage: If someone from the high school coach's staff doesn't tape their games. There is generally always someone else video taping and many of us have a camcorder or know of someone who does. So getting the video footage should be pretty easy.

Of course, every computer built these days is equipped with today's latest technology in audio & video capabilities. So with a few clicks you can upload the video footage to your computer.

Upload and display the players videos, stats, etc: NextLevel101.com only intent is to create a video viewing environment accompanied with up-to-date player information. So by following a few easy steps you will be ready to showcase your skills.

Send out player information: Say a player has selected 15 college or universities he or she is interested in playing for after high school. How would you notify the coaching staff at each college or university about the players interest? How easy would it be to send that coach or staff a pre-populated player profile email and the players link to game videos, stats, etc. This gets the ball roll'in!

How much time and money would that save you?

If you are a high school basketball player you should give this information to your high school coach. The cost benefit out weighs the effort it takes to manually do and maintain these task.
